

LIFE ON MARS

Out of five million adventurers, Five hundred of them were chosen to go to Mars. It took the adventurers two years to reach Mars. On the way, people began to have a problem with boredom, and they started to eat up all the food and drink all the water. It wasn't long that some people started to get angry because no-one would share and there were many other beginning to steal food from each other. Some people tried to share their food, but they got very angry when they realized a lot of it had been stolen.

By the time they reached Mars, everyone was pushing and yelling and trying to get out of the space ship. Finally the town manager, Marquita, stepped in and asked, “ What’s what going on, Why is everyone fighting?” Unfortunately, once they arrived on the Planet the situation of stealing and hoarding food only got worse. Eventually, some people began to get sick from not having the right vitamins.

Ashley, the artist and historian, began to take monthly portraits of the families as the year went on. Many of the people began to look malnourished by the second month on Mars. And it went on for three more months. The portraits of the people showed that they had dark rings under their eyes and sunken in cheeks. Most of them looked as if a ghost had frightened them or as if they had been raised from the dead themselves. Things looked bad.

Marquita had to step in and talk to everyone again. “ Why are you stealing from each other,” she said. : Because we are all hungry and we are getting sick” they all answered. She decided to make a speech to the whole community. She stood up in front of everyone and told them that she had set up rules that she wants everyone to live by, then she told them a great story to help them get along and share their supplies with each other

Destiny the nurse followed the speech by taking people one by one and giving them the vitamins they needed to get better. When everyone started to feel better they began to realize that arguing crazy.

Ashley's pictures began to show the signs of people getting more and more healthy. they had bright smiles and beautiful white teeth that shined like the sun.

Now that the adventurers had settled into this new civilization, they began to respect each other. the youth began to help the elderly, and they realized that fighting was mediocre. People helped each other pick up trash and carry groceries. Youth began to listen to the elderly and spend more time with them. People invited each other to parties, dinners , and so on. When the dome broke people even shared their heaters.

The final set of pictures showed people standing side by side, surrounded by food that was gathered to celebrate all that they had accomplished.

The end.
